MICROFORM READING ROOM EXTENDS HOURS OF SERVICE

The Microform Reading Room will extend its hours of service to seven days a week, beginning Monday, February 2. The reading room will be open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

The reading room, located in Room 140B adjacent to the Main Catalog, has custody of microforms of monographs and serials from the Library's general collections filmed for preservation, as well as all microforms not retained by any of the special custodial divisions. Holdings represent the equivalent of over 1.25 million volumes and include a number of micropublishing projects not fully cataloged for printed cards in such areas as American doctoral dissertations, early American imprints, U.S. nondepository, United Nations, and Organization of American States documents, U.S. City Directories to 1901, early English imprints, and medieval manuscript books and archival materials from certain European and Latin American repositories.

Use of the Microform Reading Room has increased steadily in recent years as the growth of the collections has reflected the growth of the micropublishing industry. With the new hours, the Microform Reading Room will be open on the same schedule as the Main Reading Room, permitting readers maximum opportunity to use its facilities.

LC OBSERVES BLACK HISTORY MONTH

In observance of Afro-American (Black) History Month, an exhibit of Afro-Americana will open in the Library on February 2. The display will consist of 60 photographs, prints, books, broadsides, and manuscripts and will be arranged by the subjects of public service, civil rights, military service, entertainment, science and invention, literature, education, and sports.

The earliest material in the exhibit pertains to the Reconstruction period and includes representations of seven of the 15 black U.S. Congressmen who served during the period. Included are two Senators, Hiram R. Revels and Blanche K. Bruce. Also represented is Frederick Douglass, civil rights leader in the 19th century who until his death in 1895 was the chief spokesman of the Negro in America.

Some of the photographs to be shown include a view of the crowd assembled on the Mall between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial during the "Freedom March" in Washington, D.C., on August 28, 1963; Martin Luther King, Jr., receiving the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964; and a view of the protest march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., headed by Martin Luther King, Jr., in 1965.

The exhibit demonstrates the capability of black Americans in many fields of endeavor. One such area is that of science and invention, and as examples the exhibit illustrates the achievements of polar explorer Matthew A. Henson, who in 1909 accompanied

LAPS EXHIBIT TRACES SPANISH ACTIONS IN REVOLUTIONARY WAR

Major military campaigns conducted by Spanish forces against the British during the American Revolution are examined in a new Bicentennial exhibit at the Library. Entitled "The American Revolution in the Spanish Borderlands," the exhibit of rare books, manuscripts, maps, and periodicals reveals Spanish military and political activities in the borderlands (present-day Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Missouri) during the Revolutionary War.

The exhibit focuses on the movements of Bernardo de Gálvez, the Spanish governor of Louisiana and military commander of the Spanish forces that captured British positions at Baton Rouge, Natchez, Mobile, Pensacola, and the Bahamas.

At least two years before Spain, as an ally of France, declared open hostilities against Great Britain, Gálvez was quietly preparing for war in the borderlands. In a 1777 letter to the Continental Congress, its agent in New Orleans, Oliver Pollock, wrote that if the colonials should attack Pensacola, Gálvez "... would furnish your troops with cash and in short anything in his powers they may stand in want of." The Congress did not act on this invitation; four years later Gálvez captured the town himself.

Among the correspondence on exhibit are several letters written by Gálvez relating to military matters. In a letter to Thomas Jefferson, then Governor of Virginia, Gálvez stresses the strategic importance of the Mississippi; in a letter to the Spanish Lieutenant Governor at St. Louis, Fernando de Leyba, he relates the abortive British attack on that town and the subsequent pursuit of British forces by a joint Spanish-American military expedition. In that letter he also alludes to George Rogers Clark, who received aid from the Spanish, and who was considered a good friend of Leyba.

Also on view are newspaper accounts from the London Chronicle of April 4, 1780, and the Spanish newspaper Gaceta de Madrid of January 14, 1780, of the defeat of British troops in Baton Rouge by Gálvez' army.

Gálvez' capture in 1781 of the town of Pensacola, which opened the way to the conquest of West Florida, was aided in part by the American Navy. When the Spanish fleet refused to enter Pensacola Bay where a battery of British guns defended the entrance, Gálvez boarded the brig "Galveztown," which was under the command of American naval officers, and successfully led his own small Louisiana squadron into the bay. A 1778 manuscript map by Joseph Purcell illustrates the town and the British Fort George; another map, appearing in a limited edition of Gálvez' personal diary, Diario de las operaciones contra la plaza de Panzacola, graphically depicts the attack itself. In a diary kept by Francisco de Miranda, an officer serving under Gálvez, appears yet another diary, this one a British officer's account of the operations against Pensacola.

Gálvez followed up the capture of Pensacola with an expedition against British possessions in the Caribbean, culminating in the fall of the Bahamas in 1782.

The exhibit which opens on February 2 in the foyer of the Hispanic Society Reading Room will be on view through June 30.

STAFF NEWS

DEATHS OF FORMER STAFF MEMBERS

Thomas F. Raftery, a former senior disbursing assistant in the Disbursing Office, died on January 18 at Fairfax Hospital.

Mr. Raftery retired on July 31, 1974, after more than 30 years of Federal service. Born in Washington, D.C., Mr. Raftery lived in Ireland in his youth and attended schools in County Galway. In 1929, he returned to Washington, where he attended Georgetown University. Mr. Raftery enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps in 1942 and was assigned duties in finance and disbursing until his retirement in 1964. He came the Library of Congress in May of that year as disbursing assistant and was promoted in January 1971 to the position he held at the time of his retirement.

Mr. Raftery is survived by his wife, Frances L., two daughters, Kathleen R. Vragoo and Mary R. Kingman, two brothers, Michael A. and John J. Odea of Ireland, and three sisters, Mrs. Charles Murphy of New York, Mrs. Joseph Parsons of Detroit, and Mrs. Patrick Griffin of Ireland. A funeral mass was said on Wednesday, January 21, at St. Michael's Catholic Church in Annandale, Va., followed by burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Word has reached the Library that Shio Sakanishi, a staff member of the Library from 1930 to 1941, died at her home in Oiso, Japan, on January 14. She was 79 years old.

Born in Tokyo, Miss Sakanishi first studied at Tokyo Women's Christian College, and then received her B.A. degree in 1925 from Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., and her M.A. in 1926 and Ph. D. in 1929 from the University of Michigan. She served one year as assistant professor at Hollins College in Virginia before coming to the Library as assistant in the Division of Chinese Literature (now Orientalia Division), the first Japanese appointed to a position in the Library of Congress. She organized and cataloged the then largely unattended Japanese collection and subsequently developed it through a program of systematic acquisitions. During her tenure, the collection trebled from 12,000 to 34,000 volumes. "Notes on Japanese Accessions," her descriptive report on notable works received, appeared each year in an appendix to the Annual Report of the Library of Congress from 1931 to 1940.

In addition to her regular reference service within the Library, she assisted other libraries, including the University of Michigan Library, the University of Minnesota Library, the New York Public Library, and the Toledo Museum of Arts, on reference and acquisitions matters. She provided translation assistance to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Social Security Board, the Railway Retirement Board, and other Government agencies. She also assisted the Department of State in 1939 in a careful translation into English of the Treaty of Amity and Commerce Between the United States and Japan, signed on July 29, 1858, of which the Dutch version was considered the original by both countries. During this period Miss Sakanishi was also the author of eight books in English, including translations of Japanese poetry.

Miss Sakanishi left the Library when World War II broke out to return to Japan by exchange ship. She worked for the Japan Broadcasting Corp. and the Pacific Society, as well as for the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Councilors of the Japanese Diet (Parliament). She served on many Japanese government committees and commissions, including the National Public Safety Commission, from which she resigned a year ago. She was a popular speaker and a panelist for Japanese radio, and a prolific writer, publishing 32 books in Japanese.

In April and May of 1963, Miss Sakanishi came to the United States on a tour sponsored by the Department of State. She was a guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Library on April 2, 1963.

RETIREMENTS

William E. Towsey, Jr., a bibliographer in the Library Services Division of the Congressional Research Service, retired on December 31 after more than 28 years of service to the Library.

Mr. Towsey, a native of Port Royal, Pa., earned his A.B. degree in history from Ursinus College in 1939. He served with the U.S. Army between 1942 and 1946, after which he entered the Drexel Institute of Technology Library School. He earned a bachelor's degree in library science in 1947.

Dr. Boorstin and Mr. Towsey

Mr. Towsey was accepted into the Library's Intern Program in July 1947 and was assigned to the Information Section of the former Legislative Reference Service. This section subsequently became the Library Services Division, and, in 1953, Mr. Towsey was promoted to the position of bibliographer. His work as a bibliographer was primarily in the fields of the environment and natural resources. During his career, Mr. Towsey compiled many useful bibliographies, several of which appeared in or as Congressional publications.

Mr. Towsey was honored at a retirement party given for him by his friends and colleagues in the Whittall Pavilion on December 18. On December 31 the Librarian presented Mr. Towsey a Meritorious Service Award, recognizing his many years of dependable, dedicated, and loyal service and his great assistance to CRS researchers in their efforts to respond to Congressional inquiries.

Robert H. Land, chief of the General Reference and Bibliography Division and assistant director for bibliographic and reference services of the Reference Department, who retired at the end of 1974 but was rehired for a temporary period, resigned on December 31, 1975, bringing to a close 24 years of dedicated service. The assistant chief of the division, Edward N. MacConomy, is serving as acting chief until a successor is appointed.

Mr. Land joined the Library staff in 1951 as assistant chief of the Manuscript Division. In 1953, he received a Superior Accomplishment Award and was promoted in 1958 to assistant chief of the General Reference and Bibliography Division. He served as chief of the division for nine months during 1961 while his predecessor, Henry Dubester, was detailed to a special assignment. He succeeded Mr. Dubester as chief in June 1964. Since October 1966, Mr. Land has also served as assistant director for bibliographic and reference services of the Reference Department.

Mr. Land is a graduate of William and Mary College, where he received an A.B. degree in 1934. He received an M.A. degree in history from the University of Virginia in 1936 and a B.S. degree in library service from Columbia University in 1940. He was an instructor in history and archivist at William and Mary College from 1938 to 1951 and was in charge of the library at the college from 1945 to 1951 as associate librarian and librarian. During World War II, he served as an officer with the U.S. Navy.

He has written articles on colonial history and on reference work with manuscripts and has lectured on the custody and service of manuscripts at special institutes. He is the author of "Bacon's Castle, Surrey County, Virginia," "Defense of Archives Against Human Foes," "The First Williamsburg Theater," "The Library of Congress and College Libraries," "The Shelby Family Papers," "Theater in Colonial Virginia," and "The National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections," among others. He has taught history courses at the Northern Virginia Center of the University of Virginia. In 1961, a course on the Civil War which he conducted for the George Washington University was telecast by Station WTOP and brought the university an award from the Civil War Centennial Commission.

During the past decade, Mr. Land has served as the Library's coordinator of the joint graduate program at George Washington University. He is a life member of the American Library Association and Phi Beta Kappa, as well as a member of bibliographical and historical associations and societies.

Mr, Land

An avid gardener, Mr. Land maintains at his home in Alexandria, Va., an extensive and beautiful garden of tulips and other spring flowers, as well as a productive vegetable garden at his summer home in Potomac, Va. He and Mrs. Land will be able to spend more time in their gardens in retirement than was possible during his busy professional years of library service.

The Library of Congress lost one of its distinguished interpreters of European law last month with the retirement of Domas Krivickas, a senior legal specialist in the European Law Division of the Law Library, on December 31 after nearly 24 years of service.

Mr. Krivickas joined the Library in 1952 in the Mid-European Law Project of the Foreign Law Section, later named the European Law Division. He brought an international education and experience rare among lawyers. Because of this background and his knowledge of languages, he was expertly able to interpret the law of Lithuania, the Soviet Union, and France, as well as canon law, Roman law, the law of the Holy Roman Empire, feudal law, and ancient law.

Mr. Krivickas studied at the University of Lithuania from 1925 to 1929, at the Universities of Paris, Cologne, and Berlin to 1932, and at the Academy of International Law in The Hague in 1931 and 1932. He received his Doctorate of Law from the University of Lithuania in 1932.

From 1932 to 1944, Krivickas was a professor of constitutional and international law at the University of Lithuania and later at the University of Vilnius and the Baltic University in Hamburg, Germany. He was elected an associate member of the Lithuanian Academy of Sciences of Lithuania in 1942.

In addition to his academic work, Mr. Krivickas was a legal adviser to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and a member of the State Council of Lithuania from 1935 to 1939, a member of the Lithuanian-German Mixed Commission on the Nationality Question during the same period, and a member of the legal committees for the defense of Lithuanian cases at the Permanent Court of International Justice and the Conciliation Commission in The Hague and the Arbitration Court in Bern, Switzerland. As a legal adviser he participated in negotiations with Germany, Poland, Estonia, and the Soviet Union.

In 1944, he fled from Lithuania and settled with his family in West Germany. In 1950 he came to the United States and in 1957 he became a naturalized citizen.

Mr. Krivickas has published numerous articles, translations, and reports on international affairs and law in Lithuanian and in English. Several of his Library of Congress reports were published in congressional studies. He has also written and edited many of the articles in the 36-volume Lietuvių Enciklopedja, (Boston, 1953-1969), and in a 2-volume version of that work in English, Encyclopedia Lituanica.

Mr. Krivickas is a member of the International Association of Law Librarians, the American Association of Law Libraries, the American Society of International Law, the Law Librarians' Society of Washington, D.C., and the Institute of Lithuanian Studies.
